CELLULOID REVOLT

German Screen Cultures and the Long 1968

Edited by CHRISTINA GERHARDT & MARCO ABEL

The epoch-making revolutionary period universally known in Germany as '68, it can be argued, predated that year and extended well into the 1970s, and to this day there is much debate about its effects on all areas of German society and culture. Yet while scholars have written extensively on the Young German Cinema of the 60s, the New German Cinema of the 1970s, and East German DEFA cinema, relatively little sustained scholarly attention has thus far been paid to how West and East German cinemas participated in-took place in, shaped, and reflected on-'68. With the period now fifty years behind us, Celluloid Revolt sets out to redress that situation.

The volume aims to close the gap with new insights into what constituted German cinema around 1968 and, consequently, significantly impact German film historiography. Contributors engage a range of topics, including experimental and avant-garde cinema; short films; animated films; cinema in installations and museum exhibits; collectively produced cinemas; feminist cinema; Arbeiterfilme (workers' films); crime films; and the relationship to other cinemas, be it French cinéma vérité or US direct cinema.
